Polarity

Most of the polarity we see around the world is between knowledge and ignorance. Ignorant people are easily duped. Educated people are not. The dishonesty enabled by the internet has allowed many millions of ignorant people to get sucked down an algorithm and trapped in a cult based on brazen lies.

How did we get here? There are several main reasons.

In the 1960's birth control began to spread around the world. For the next generation, it was first taken up by the most intelligent, educated, and responsible portion of the global population. The children of that generation are now in their 40's, and the percentage of people raised by intelligent, educated, and responsible parents has substantially diminished.

As high tech spread around the world, an ever increasing portion of our children began to live in increasingly fictitious realities. These people are now in their 20's and 30's, and most of them, instead of gaining knowledge of the real world, are living with a wide variety of fictitious perspectives of reality.

All through history, after every innovation in communication technology, there was a period of dishonesty, often with devastating consequences. The internet is an exponential increase in the ability to disseminate and perpetuate very convincing lies, and a very large percentage of the population are lacking a broad enough perspective to see the lies for what they are.
