

Socialism

It's unfortunate that many dictators have called their system of government socialist when a dictatorship is actually about as far from true socialism as you can get. True socialism comes from the bottom up.

Capitalism worked reasonably well when there were plenty of untapped resources and there was plenty of room out back to take a dump, but it's an abject failure in addressing the coming crisis of global warming and pollution resulting from our consumption addiction. Unbridled capitalism inherently gathers the power of money that shapes our destiny into fewer and fewer hands and they're seldom the people with the wisdom to fund the things that we need.